ERROR An Ontario newspaper ad promoting the H1N1 flu shot instructs Ottawa Citizen readers to consult a government website in order to find the nearest location for the free inoculation

Problem was, the website address in the ad published yesterday directed readers to a discount travel and shopping site.

Progressive Conservative MPP Lisa MacLeod discovered the gaffe after constituents phoned her office wondering what the deal was. For the "most current information about H1N1 flu and the clinics near you" readers are told to: visitontario.ca/flu. But this link is for www.payless.ca a website that features discount travel deals and sells computers, flat panel TVs and major household appliances.

Thousands of people some of whom waited outside for hours — came out to get their H1N1 vaccines when the city opened its mass vaccination clinics vesterday.

An hour after the clinics opened at 2:30 p.m., the line outside the Tom Brown Arena — one of five sites open seven days a week for the duration of the campaign — snaked around the building.
"We've got a lot of interest, obviously, and that's promising," said Ottawa's medical officer of health Dr. Isra Levy. "This is going to be a many, many week, if not months exercise here. It's too early to say how it's going, but I'm very encouraged by the interest and certainly very encouraged by the staff, work extremely well.

Levy said he wasn't surprised by the turnout.

surveys have shown that there would be a lot of interest," he said. Despite the long lines,

Four-and-a-half-year-old Mika Hoffer reacts as she is injected with the H1N1 flu vaccine at a mass vaccination clinic in Ottawa yesterday. Thousands of people came out to the clinics. More coverage, page 6.

"the actual supply of vaccines is not an issue," said Levy yesterday.

The first shipment, which was about 37,500 vaccines, will be followed by a second shipment to-

For the next several weeks, the priority will be vaccinating those with chronic medical conditions, children between six months and five years of age, pregnant women and front-line health-care workers.

Health-care workers are asked to identify themselves so they can be expedited through the line, Levy said.

Ottawa resident John Saumier waited two hours to get the vaccine yesterday, but the shot was definitely worth it, he said.

Saumier's doctor recommended that the 53-yearold get the vaccine immediately because he is on a waiting list for a heart transplant.

"We're asking the public to be patient and bear with us."

Sabrina Dawson brought her son, who is just under six months old, in for a vaccine, and ended up getting one herself.

People that don't get the vaccine are putting others at risk," said Dawson, a geneticist.

Still, the clinic wasn't without problems.

Although the clinic at the arena didn't open until 2:30 p.m., Rachel Inch was in line by 1:15 to ensure that she and her six-month-old son, Chesel, would be among the first to get the shot.

But when the doors opened, Inch said some people cut in front.

"It was disorderly," Inch said. Still, she said, the wait for the vaccine was 'definitely worthwhile.'

Most of rapid transit cost won't come from city taxes: Treasurer

TIM WIECLAWSKI tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Building the first phase of the rapid transit network will be expensive and require a big loan, but it is affordable, said city treasurer Marian Similuk.

In fact, according to Similuk's financial modelling, of the required $2.1 billion to fund the project, only $38 million spread over the next 10 vears would come from city taxes.

"When we applied all the funds that we had available ... we were able to fund this with very minimal debt to be serviced from the citizens." said Similuk.

When working out the funding models, Similuk said she didn't just look at the affordability of the tunnel, but for all the Transitway improvements and life cycle costs that would take place while the tunnel is being built.

Assuming the province and the federal government would cover twothirds of the cost for construction components. Similuk said that would account for $1.7 billion.

Cash from transit levies. development charges and provincial and federal gas tax would make up $1.46 billion.

The remaining $700 million would be covered by a loan, of which $38 million is paid by taxes, with the remainder paid down by future development charges and gas tax revenues.

City sports legend 'left giant positive footprints': Mourner

Past owner of 67's remembered as man who put family first

TRACEY TONG

Hundreds of people bid farewell yesterday to one of Ottawa's sports legends and a man who, despite his successes, always put his family first.

A former owner of the Ottawa 67's and the Ottawa Lvnx, Howard Darwin also brought cable television to the city and was a boxing promoter, saving the best seats in the house for former prime minister and avid boxing fan John boxing fan John Diefenbaker.

But even with his success, Darwin, who died at age 78 Thursday, never forgot what mattered most -

"The thing I admire about Howard is his ability to be in business but to continue to have respect and understanding for his family," said Claude Bennett, a former politician who eulogized Darwin at the St. John the Apostle Church yesterday.

"It's remarkable in this day, when you really don't see that same kind of commitment to both family and business. His kids were his pride and joy and as grandchildren came along and then greatgrandchildren, they were just as important. And he wanted to make sure they all had opportunities he didn't have and experiences he didn't have.

Darwin rose up from humble beginnings, said Rennett

But even with his suc-"Howard never changed," Bennett said. "In all the years I've known him, which is getting on close to 50 years, even with all his tremendous success in business, he remained the same fellow.

His wife, Connie, kept him steadfast, said Bennett.

"She did an outstanding job of giving Howard guidance, direction and support," he said.

To Darwin's grandchildren and great grandchildren, Bennett said, "Your grandfather left giant and positive footprints in this city and those who knew him and those who just met him had tremendous respect for him. It was that warm smile, that twinkle in the eye, the frankness and sincerity of the decisions that he made and through with." followed

Darwin created places for people in the city, said Father Thomas Riopelle. "Howard lived life to the fullest and never once opted out of it," he said.

Transit tunnel access points revealed

STATIONS When the Downtown Ottawa Transit Tunnel is finally built, each of the four subterranean stations will be accessible from at least two street level entrances and residents will take three escalators to reach the street from the platform and vice-versa

A more refined functional design for the first section of the city's transit plan was revealed last night, laying out precisely where the access points to each station would be built, the technology choice for the system and the strategy for moving commuters.

Access points for the Downtown Western station will be at the new central branch of the Ottawa public library, on Albert Street between Bay and Lyon and further east at the site of a current Transitway stop on Albert Street near the Place de Ville Complex.

The Downtown East station will be accessible at two entrances on the north and south sides of the Sun Life Building where Albert and Queen streets intersect with O'Connor.

The third station would pass below the Government Conference Centre and connect to the Rideau Centre. There would be an entrance on the west side of the canal, another at the conference centre and at the north entrance to the Rideau Centre.

The fourth underground station would serve the University of Ottawa, near the current Campus Station, but on the west side of Nicholas Street.

Corporate services seek 5% bump in budget

TIM WIECLAWSKI tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Add another modest increase to next year's property tax rate.

The Corporate Services and Economic Development Committee called for a five per cent bump, or an extra $6.4 million, when it tabled its 2010 draft budget yesterday.

That would bring the budget up to $133.8 million from $127.4 million, representing a 0.64 per cent tax increase.

Committee chair Rob Jellett, a councillor from Cumberland Ward, said compensation costs are the biggest reason for the increase. The budget calls for an extra $4 million for wages, including a shortfall from this year and 2.5 per cent wage increase for 2010. Some of that was offset by $784,000 in savings from corporate reorganization earlier this year.

"The next biggest investment is on the IT side, $1.5 million in operating costs so we can provide better service through our website and through 311," said Jellett.

The proposed capital budget calls for a $12 million investment to enhance e-services, to revamp the city's website, and to turn the 311 customer service centre into a true single point of access to municipal information and services. This investment is expected to eventually yield $12.8 million in annual savings by 2014.

This brings the proposed tax increase to 3.24 per cent, with the Transportation and Planning and Environment Committee still to report. That does not include a two per cent infrastructure levy.

Last week, the transit services tabled a draft budget asking for a $21.5 million increase to its operations — a 12.7 per cent increase over last year, bringing it to $190 million. That would represent a 2.1 per cent property tax rise.

Community and Protective Services is looking for a 1.2 per cent increase to its budget, which would add 0.5 per cent to the tax rate

Blood donations to honour military

TRIBUTE Canadian Blood Services is encouraging blood donors to give in tribute to the men and women of Canadian Forces engaged in military activities throughout the world.

"Many Canadians have chosen to wear red on Fridays as a tribute to our troops and their sacrifices," said Canadian Blood Services spokeswoman Ann Suurland.

Between Nov. 2 and 14, Canadian Blood Services is asking people to take that support to the next level and donate blood in honour of men and women in uniform, Suurland said.

In 2006, Canadian Blood Services and the Canadian Forces created the "Walking Blood Bank." Canadian Blood Services pre-screens every serving man and woman before they are deployed or if they are on active duty, meaning the military has access to on-call donors in the event that large amounts of blood are needed.

Canadians living in homeless shelters and rooming houses have a much shorter life expectancy than the general population, researchers conclude. THE CANADIAN PRESS

How the women ran 24 Sussex

Elliott ierre Trudeau used to complain, as most leaders do, about journalists trying to pry into his personal life. It's none of our business, he'd say. And most of us agreed, shied away and gave him a break, as we did with John F. Kennedy.

But when you read the new Trudeau bio, Just Watch Me: The Life Of Pierre Elliott Trudeau 1968-2000 by John English, you understand why there are those who say we ought to stretch our noses.

The book's big breaking story, in a nutshell, is How the Babes Ran 24 Sussex. There's Margaret and Margot and Barbra and Kim and Gale and Liona — and I'll stop there.

The book might well have been called "Just Watch Them." They impacted PET's election timing, his grand strategies, his moods, his decision-making. In 1977, the Liberals had a big lead in the polls and we in the fourth estate wondered why the PM didn't push ahead with a campaign. Now we find out. The story was: Maggie Puts Kibosh On Campaign. She stressed Pierre out so much that it cracked his vaunted mental discipline. He couldn't focus enough to run an election. He waited until 1979 and lost to Joe Clark.

This isn't sensationalism.

English is a sober-minded scholar who had access to Trudeau's private papers. A former Liberal MP, he has written an illuminating book, the second of a twovolume study.

It relates how actress and eacenik Margot Kidder helped convince the PM to launch one of his major initiatives - his international peace mission of the early 1980s. In talks at a black-tie dinner in Washington, she lit into Ronald Reagan's senior troglodytes with all kinds of anti-nuke volleys. Trudeau urged her on via a thigh squeeze for every direct hit.

Many observers have said Trudeau was Canada's Kennedy. This books adds another point of comparison. Each leader was unremittingly flirtatious and each leader got a great break from the reticent me-

eHealth technology requires precautions

Proponents of eHealth argue that if other regions of the world have made significant strides in eHealth technology, what's wrong with Canada? Caving in to what everyone else is doing is an injudicious argument. Although we cannot be left out of the globalization loop, we need to proceed with caution.

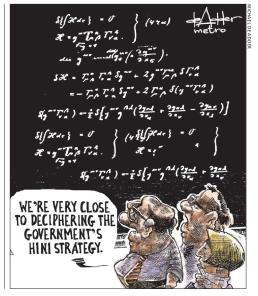

While an eHealth record system will improve time efficiency, wait times, and patient safety (by lowering the risk of drug interactions), scrutiny and dili-gence are necessary as we move forward. There are big bucks to be made by individuals and enterprises, aggressively driving this venture, yet we must learn from the eHealth debacle in Ontario where more than $1 billion was wasted through lack of oversight, broken rules and decadent consultant contracts.

Health Canada has added $500 million to the $2 billion given to the Canada Health Infoway to revolutionize Canada's health records. While this sounds great, it is estimated that Canadians will have to pay at least $23 billion in capital and operating costs over the next decade. Although touted as an economic stimulus to create jobs, according to a Canadian Business Online report, most of this money will be stuffed into the coffers of U.S. multinational corporations, providing the sophisticated eHealth record software. Given tough economic times and our strained health-care system, many argue that money will be better spent for drugs, senior care and additional health-care staff.

Another consideration: Privacy assurances. Who could forget the 11,500 patient files that skimmed by a hacker from the AHS Edmonton network in May.

The progress of eHealth in Canada must not be driven by greed or a need to keep up with global coun-terparts, but instead by patient interests, health-care efficiencies and long-term costs. For this to happen effectively, caution and public scrutiny are our first lines of defence.

Carney said he and other bank governors are disappointed by some of the actions taken by global bankers including large bonuses being paid by ot long ago the deal breaker in relationship was infidelity. In fact, when Nevada's 1950s quickie divorce law came into being the only recognized grounds for a marital split were infidelity and extreme cruelty.

Today breaking up legally is easy, no reason required. But increasingly the cause for relationship founder is financial dis-

If you find that hard to believe take a gander at the just released results of a couples and money survey commissioned by Credit Canada and Capital One. Here are some of the high ... err... lowlights:

 More than a third of couples commit to a relationship without having an open discussion about money.

 86 per cent of couples admit to fighting about money — small wonder when you consider the above point.

• The bickering isn't occasional either; more than a third disagree about money regularly.

Women and men aren't just battling over spending, they have radical differences in their approach to most things financial. For example:

 Nearly half of those in relationships don't believe they have the same philos-ophy about financial issues as their partners.

 Men's worst money fear is not being able to retire. Women's worst money fear is not being able to pay for their kids' education.

And here's where you see the rot setting in:

Alison's Money Rule:

 Ever wonder if you'd make a good match? Don't look to the stars for an answer; instead check out your financial compatibility.

· Nearly one third of women and 27 per cent of men lie to their partner about how much they spend.

 The partner who is not in control of money management is 55 per cent more likely to hide debt from their significant other.

In 40 per cent of relationships troubled by money, one or the other person believes their spouse will not talk openly about financial issues.

If you're interested in how well you and your mate suit each other on the money front, try out Credit Canada's compatibility test, crediteducation weekcanada.com.

You have to do it together, so let this be the first step in ending the relationship financial divide.

NHL future looking bright: Experts

As HDTV becomes readily available, more U.S. viewers tuning into hockey

High-definition television images are luring more American eyeballs to professional hockey and invigorating the NHL's prospects in the U.S., say leading sports industry experts.

Forget adding a bit of oomph — these days, U.K. women are opting for massive implants

ELISABETH BRAW

Emma Lindley decided she was tired of her small breasts. So last year, she got implants — but not discreet ones. Lindley chose to go from an A cup to a D cup.

"I didn't feel feminine in most clothes, particularly bikinis and dresses," says Lindley, a 26-year-old Londoner. "And because of my small breasts, I lacked confidence, which affected everyday life. I felt underdeveloped and like a boy.'

According to Cloverleaf Medical, a leading British distributor of breast implants, sales of its largest implants have increased by 20 per cent over the past five years.

Aesthetics are by no means the only factor to consider when deciding upon implant size. In a discussion of breast implant surgery on its website, plastic-surgery.ca, the Canadian Society of Plastic Surgeons notes that "in general, the larger the implant, the greater the risk of complica-

ADDING TO YOUR FAMILY? CONGRATULATIONS! NOW GO SEE YOUR DENTIST!

If you have arrived at that stage in your life when you believe it is time to add a new little person to your family, it can be quite an exciting time. Nothing changes your life as much as having a baby. The responsibility for that tiny life can be overwhelming at times, but the rewards are truly priceless

Of course, with all of the information available, today's potential mothers are better informed about what to expect than any mother in the past. Most of you know the importance of a better diet, including a folic acid supplement, during pregnancy. If you are a smoker, you also know that you need to stop smoking. And of course, consuming alcohol during pregnancy is something to be avoided

What many of you may not know is that good dental health can also be vital to the development of a healthy baby. Part of your pre-pregnancy planning, therefore should include a thorough dental check-up to make sure that your teeth and gums are as healthy as possible. If any dental work is required, even just a good cleaning, this can be addressed before getting pregnant.

The risks associated with poor dental health are numerous. The increase in hormone levels during pregnancy can make the gums more sensitive to dental plague and oral bacteria. Plaque that finds its way into the placenta and amniotic fluid can lead to premature delivery and babies with a lower birth weight.

There is also some concern that women with inflammatory gum disease are more susceptible to developing gestational diabetes. The exact reason for this is not entirely clear. However, there is some belief that it can be attributed to the inflammation impairing the ability of the body to regulate its blood

And of course, should you be so unfortunate as to experience "morning sickness" while pregnant, this can be problematic for your dental health. Nausea and vomiting can create a highly acidic environment in the mouth and that acid can damage the mother's teeth Do not brush your teeth after a bout of nausea! Instead, you should rinse your mouth with a mixture of baking soda and water as this will neutralize

These important tips will help ensure that mother and baby stay as healthy as possible during pregnancy. And we all know that a healthy lifestyle during pregnancy is vital to the development of a healthy baby.

If you are planning on adding to your family and are unsure about your dental health, talk to your dentist before getting pregnant. Because good dental health is a healthy habit for you and your baby...and healthier habits lead to healthier lives.

here's been quite a fuss kicked up in recent weeks over a new book called Why Women Have Sex: Understanding Sexual Motivations — From Adventure To Revenge (and Everything in Between).

Authors Cindy M. Meston and David M. Buss spent five years grilling more than 1,000 women about why they have sex and discovered that - surprise! women have sex for a lot of reasons. Some do it out of duty, some for fun, some for money and some to relieve menstrual cramps (endorphins released through orgasm temporarily relieve pain).

I'm not sure why this is such a revelation to every-one. Just as women eat for reasons beyond survival, and shop for reasons beyond making sure their children don't go to school naked, they have sex for a variety of reasons, which range from the lofty to the less-than-honourable to the plain boring. course, it's fascinating to examine the why behind the reasons we do a lot of things in life, and sex should be no exception. To this end, the book is an interesting read.

But why just scrutinize women's sexual motivations? The authors argue that women's reasons are more complex, in part, because women can get pregnant and therefore must be more selective about why and with whom they have sex. I'm sure there's some truth to that. But I can guarantee, even without doing five years of re-search, that, if they're honest about it, men have sex for just as many different

In the press release for the book, Meston says that the research "could help increase empathy and sexual communication between partners, and between men and women.'

It seems to me that as long as we keep making female sexuality more and more complex, while we continue to talk about men's desire as if it's just like a light switch waiting to be flicked on, we're moving in the opposite direc-

A few years ago I made a pilgrimage to Harry's New York Bar in Paris — the place where vodka first met tomato iuice back in 1921 — to learn more about the classic cocktail. The secret is the spirit. Since it's almost Halloween, I think Crystal Head Vodka ($51.00 -$74.95) from Newfoundland would be more appropriate.

THIS THIRD TRIP to the Ice Age cooler is a Jurassic Lark. It should delight families with its amusing new dino buddies, even as it risks terrifying tots with its marauding Tvrannosaurus rex.

Family values turn to tribal trauma after woolly mammoths Manny (Ray Romano) and Ellie (Queen Latifah) announce to their prehistoric pack that they're expecting a bouncing bundle of fur.

Sabre-toothed Diego (Denis Leary) takes this as his cue to go solo (no way is he babysitting), while nutso sloth Sid (John Leguizamo) has the opposite reaction, regretting his childlessness. Both find immediate relief as Diego splits while Sid sits upon three dino eggs he happens upon. The eggs prove to be a real handful, especially when they hatch into three boisterous biters.

Halloween essentials

Holiday serves up spooky film, TV options

With Halloween only a few days away, everyone is suddenly in the mood to eniov

some good old fashioned morbid entertainment.

Last week the latest Saw movie debuted and next week Donnie Darko director Richard Kelly will provide us with some Twilight Zone inspired chills with The Box.

But if you don't feel like venturing out to the multiplex for an annual dose of horror, there are still plenty of ways to excite your eyeballs with Halloween entertainment at home. We've compiled a list of the essential Halloween classics.

Halloween: John Carpenter's 1979 horror classic has become a Halloween favourite for a reason.

Not only does the movie take its title and setting from the holiday, but it's also the movie that launched the slasher genre that dominated horror for years.

A subtle horror movie that relies more on suspense and dread than goopy gore, Halloween has lost none of it's ability to give audiences sleepless nights in the thre decades since it's original release.

The Simpsons Tree-

house Of Horror: For 20 years The Simpsons have been providing horror/comedy for Halloween with what is typically their best episode of the season. What better way could there be to celebrate the holiday than by watching Homer threaten the world's favourite animated family with an axe in an homage to The Shining or seeing a creepy merchant handing out possessed Krusty dolls with delicious bowls of frogurt?

It's The Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown: Before The Simpsons claimed supremacy over animated TV holiday specials, there was Charlie Brown.

Charles Schulz's beloved awkward youngster and his group of charmingly childish friends set out on a night of trick or treating and a search for the mysterious Halloween monster "the great pumpkin" in this TV classic.

Trick R' Treat: Released only a few weeks ago, it might seem like jumping the gun to call Trick R' Treat a holiday classic, but one viewing of Michael Dougherty's directorial debut should be all you need to add it to your annual Halloween viewing list.

This anthology horror movie set on Halloween combines liberal doses of comedy and horror for pure giddy holiday entertainment.

The combined tales of an evil principal, mysterious partygoers, a Halloween prank gone wrong, and a murderous little trick or

The Nightmare Before Christmas: Tim Burton's stop motion classic might just be the perfect movie to watch on Halloween.

Jackson rehearsal film coming to big screen

The 50 comeback concerts Michael Jackson planned in London last summer sold out in a few hours.

With those shows relegated to what-if status by his death in June, the question now is how well the singer can pack movie theatres with Michael Jackson: This Is It, a chronicle of his concert preparations that now stands as his final performance.

Advance ticket sales have been brisk, but no one has a handle on how big the turnout might be when the film opens on Wednesday.

Some think it's likely to surpass the $31.1 million opening weekend and the $65.3 million lifetime haul of Hannah Montana & Miley Cyrus: Best of Both Worlds Concert, the biggest concert movie on record. Some expect a $100 million total domestic haul. Others think it could go much higher, but how high is anyone's guess.

Joe Jackson great dad: Sharpton

ALL YOU NEED IS TOUGH LOVE Al Sharpton singled out Joe Jackson as an outstanding parent. Jackson, who has weathered accusations of abuse from his children, especially his late son Michael Jackson, was recognized with an award by Sharpton's National Action Network over the weekend. "The arrogance of (people) attacking a man for being a stern father," Sharpton said.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Pineapple Beef Stir-Fry

1 can (28 oz/796 ml) pineapple chunks 1/2 cup (125 ml) minced cilantro

1/4 cup (50 ml) soy sauce 1 tbsp (15 ml) ground gin-

1 lb (500 g) beef steak, thinly sliced 1 tsp (5 ml) cornstarch 2 tsp (10 ml) vegetable oil 1 medium red pepper, thinly sliced

1/2 cup (125 ml) cut fresh green beans 1 tbsp (15 ml) chopped

chili peppers 2 garlic cloves, minced 2 green onions, sliced

1. Drain pineapple, reserving 1 cup (250 ml) pineapple and 3/4 cup (175 ml) inice (Save remainder for another use).

2. Combine cilantro, soy sauce, ginger and reserved pineapple juice. Remove 3/4 cup (175 ml); cover and refrigerate.

3. Combine beef and remaining marinade. Refrigerate 30 minutes. Discard marinade. Mix cornstarch and reserved juice mixture until smooth. 4. Stir-fry beef in oil 5-6 minutes. Remove beef with slotted spoon and keep warm. Add pepper, beans, chili peppers and garlic to skillet; stir-fry 5 minutes. Stir juice mixture into skillet. 5. Bring to boil; stir 1 minute or until thickened. Add onions, beef and reserved pineapple. Serve over rice.
